

Toni brings 35 years of combined professional experience as a civil litigation/ employment lawyer, human resources/corporate executive and alternative dispute resolution practitioner to her current dispute resolution and mediation practice. After years of witnessing the high cost and mostly adverse impact of prolonged litigation on those involved, Toni shifted her focus to mediation in order to provide parties with a safe, professional and positive environment to take control of their own futures and resolve conflict. Toni believes that anyone involved in a dispute can benefit from a skilled mediator's guidance through a process designed to result in a more personally tailored and cost-effective result.

Toni has extensive experience mediating domestic matters. She has worked closely with families and individuals to navigate the complex and emotional issues that often arise in divorce, parenting time, child support, allocation of parental responsibility, relocation and other domestic matters. In addition, the experience and knowledge she gained from representing both corporate and individual clients, problem solving as an Executive of a Fortune 500 company, and mediating hundreds of cases make her exceptionally capable of helping parties resolve a variety of complex business, civil and workplace disputes.

Toni is a graduate, with honors, of Stanford University (B.S. Economics) and of Boalt Hall Law School, University of California, Berkeley (J.D.). She clerked for the Honorable Justice Broussard of the California Supreme Court. She is a graduate of the Aspen Institute's Crown Fellowship Leadership Development program. She received the 2013 and 2014 Divorce and Parenting Mediator of the Year Award and the 2016 Workplace Mediator of the year Award from Jefferson County Mediation Services. She is admitted to practice law in Colorado and California (currently on inactive status in both states to focus on alternative dispute resolution.) Toni is a professional member and Board member of the Mediation Association of Colorado. Contact her below at:
